The Coming Bonaparte-Huitfeldt and Belknap-May Weddings.

OTHER NEWSY TOPIC

Impromptu drawing room gatherings are not dull nowadays for want of gossipy material from which to make connecting fluks between the months of society's scatteration. Since June last whole heaps of things, unexpected and otherwise, have happened, until one feels thoroughly stupid and ignorant if an absence of a week or two has debarred a participation in the meetings where news is disseminated. West End folks, with a few noted exceptions, and especially in the congressional line, may be said to be at home. Window shades are up, lace curtains are hung, and other signs that the domestic machinery is in working order give evidence of a welcome. Everybody whose frame of mind is not wholly controlled by the events of the next fortnight in the political world looks younger and better for the summer's vaca-tion, even if it has been spent in Wash-ington, and feels a fresh thrill of interest ington, and feels a fresh thrill of interest in life, discussing the whys and wherefores for the engagements so soon to culminate in weddings. Most of the brides and grooms of these interesting occasions are young, and have in all human probability long lives in which to wonder what important personages they felt themselves on the eve of their wedding day.

Some others are entering the married state for a second time, a circumstance always most complimentary to their first partners instead of being considered in an age when sentiment is practically at a partners instead of being considered in an age when sentiment is practically at a discount forgetful of these individuals and their memories. The weddings in which popular interest will center will be the international allances, and,in keeping with this year of wonderful surprises in politics and hurricanes, some of the foreigners are marrying purely for love, since it would take more than the ordinary processes of law to discover any substantial wealth from which a dot might be secured. This very thing is quite the nicest possible refrom which a dot might be secured. This very thing is quite the nicest possible reflection and shows that good looks and pleasant ways make social prestige and attractiveness and will always be sure capital in the game of hearts. There are so many nice girls whose peaceful visions are not likely to be disturbed by calculating the cost of a bridal trousseau, but who will take an enormous interest in similar affairs where it concerns their intimate friends, as it will in the case of two of friends, as it will in the case of two of the coming brides, Miss Bonaparte and Miss Belknap, young ladies as much ad-mired for their charms of manner as good looks, and who have been friends from

The announcement of Miss Bonaparte's engagement early last summer came di-rectly by cable to Miss Belknap, who shared her friend's happiness at once with their mutual acquaintances here. We had the news, perhaps, quite as soon as the ac-quaintances of the happy man, Count von Moltke-Huitfeldt, had in Paris. Before the Bar Harbor season closed the engagement ard in every respect. Told His Experience. A great congregation neard Evangelist Moltke-Huitfeldt, had in Paris. Before the Bar Harbor season closed the engagement of Miss Belknap, whose belieship seemed undisputed both there and at Newport and Narragansett, where the earlier season was spent, became also public property. Her marriage to Mr. Paul May, attache of the Belgian legation, will take place here next month, and probably a very late date will be selected. The friends of her father, exsecretary Belknap, to whom the goldenhaired child was his proudest possession, and on whom he lavished a wealth of affection, flashes of which his own intimates enjoyed, wish that he were alive to enjoy her happiness. Miss Belknap is a handsome girl, gracious and pleasing in manner. She is well educated and a good lin-Wm. J. So far as poor human eyes can discern the future, Miss Belknap has a brilliant and happy career ahead.

The date on which Miss Bonaparte will become a countess is December 10, but the details of the grand ceremonies, for they certainly will assume that importance. NOOK. Mrs. Bonaparte, with her daughter and son, only returned to town a few days ago, the bride-elect looking handsomer and nore distinguished looking than ever. This wedding is said to give unbounded satisfaction to both contracting families, and it was hardly to be expected that with the fortune the young lady has at her disposal and with the family connections she represents, that she would marry any but a foreigner, and surely one with a title and a career. This marriage, therefore, present: all these considerations and helps her friends to bear more patiently her departure for foreign shores, where, unless a happy chance intervenes from our American point of view, the couple will live.

The Saengerbund has made decided progress since Mr. Henry Xander, the well-known planist of this city, took hold of the musical directorship of the organization, and bids to increase the enviable reputation for itself it already enjoyed among the German singing societies of the country. The chief aim of the society is to foster the love for German song, and all the work of the society will be put on the rendition of works of that character.

The officers of the Saengerbund are Frank Claudy, president; John Waldmann, vice president; R. Brauner, financial and corresponding secretary; Fred. Carl, recording secretary; Louis Faber, treasurer; Wm. Hagemann, librarian, and Henry Xander, musical director. The executive committee consists of Messrs. Chas. Dismer, Paul Havenstein, A. F. Joerss, Louis Kimmel, Henry Klinge and Albert Lepper.

Ladies are especially invited on the trip of the Macalester tomorrow to Marshall Hall on the occasion of the regular Sunday oyster roast at that resort. All the bivalves that can be disposed of will be furnished without stint, and oyster knives furnished without stint, and oyster knives will also be furnished without extra charge to assist in the work of making away with the famous Chesapeake product. The boat will leave at 11 a.m. and 2:30 p.m., and will return in time to escape the cool air of night on the water. These oyster roasts are as famous fall events as the planked shad dinners of this resort are in the spring, and the management has taken especial care to have them up to the highest standard in every respect.

CATOR. Entered into rest October 15, 1896, at 6:20 o'clock p.m., MAGGIE CATOR, nee Listin, beloved wife of Wm. Cator, aged thirty-two
